Our Mission

T'ruah: The Rabbinic Call for Human Rights brings the Torah's ideals of human dignity, equality, and justice to life by empowering rabbis and cantors to be moral voices and to lead Jewish communities in advancing democracy and human rights for all people in the United States, Israel, and the occupied Palestinian territories.

Our Theory of Change

Rabbis and cantors reach millions of people through their public moral voices and through their leadership of Jewish communities. We organize, train, and amplify the power of clergy in order to create a Jewish community committed to human rights and rooted in Torah and tradition. With our rabbis at the helm, Jewish communities are equipped to take collective action to make change and to build strong relationships across lines of difference.

Dear Friend,

As I write this letter, the assault on democracy in the United States has continued, the U.S. and Israel have plunged into yet another war with Iran, ICE continues to rip families apart, and settlers are rampaging across the West Bank carrying out violent attacks.

T'ruah continues to respond to these challenges with a moral rabbinic voice. While this annual report covers the period from October 2024 through September 2025, since then, we have organized the largest Jewish protest against ICE, brought together nearly 150 rabbis for a national convening, sent almost 50 rabbis and cantors to join their Minneapolis/St. Paul colleagues for a clergy day of action against ICE, and led a rabbinic protective present trip in the West Bank, during which settlers directly attacked our group, thankfully with no major injuries.

We know that community is everything and that our rabbis and cantors are more powerful when they learn, grow, and take action together. To that end, we held Jewish clergy convenings in New York City, Chicago, and Atlanta, and planned a National Jewish Clergy Convening for February 2026. Through T'ruah, hundreds of rabbis and cantors built connections, shared resources, and learned from experts, preparing to respond to ongoing attacks on democracy and human rights.

T'ruah's growing movement for justice and democracy is made possible by supporters of moral conviction like you. Thank you for amplifying the rabbinic moral voice. Thank you for standing with T'ruah.

In solidarity,

Rabbi Jill Jacobs

CEO of T'ruah: The Rabbinic Call for Human Rights

Our most powerful moments from Fiscal Year 2025

Rabbi Amy Eilberg leads a protest in the Bay Area outside the Israeli Consulate against the war in Gaza.

T'ruah rabbis gather in Los Angeles to call for a surge of humanitarian aid to Gaza.

Rabbi Nancy Kasten marches for immigrant justice in Texas.

Rabbi Elizheva Hurvich serves as a poll chaplain in Tucson on Election Day, one of approximately 70 T'ruah clergy who deployed to nine battleground states to keep the peace at the polls.

T'ruah rabbis and cantors from across the Midwest gather to strategize resistance as the new Trump administration begins.

Chicago area T'ruah rabbis and cantors take to the streets to protest starvation in Gaza.

Nearly 100 rabbis and cantors gather in New York City to strategize resistance as the new Trump administration begins.

Rabbi Andy Vogel sounds the shofar for the Tisha B'Av: Rebuild Sanctuary gathering with hundreds of rabbis, cantors, and Jewish community members from across Massachusetts.

New York City rabbis and cantors are arrested after blocking traffic in front of the Israeli consulate protesting the war in Gaza and the Israeli government's policy of starvation.

T'ruah CEO Rabbi Jill Jacobs testifies before Congress about the right approach to combatting antisemitism in schools, to keep Jewish students safe while protecting democracy.

We resisted
modern-day tyrants.

In the face of rising authoritarianism, the breakdown of democratic norms, and an increase in violent ICE raids in communities across the country, T'ruah rabbis and cantors took to the streets to act.

Rabbis and cantors in Los Angeles joined other faith leaders to nonviolently face down the National Guard, who were kidnapping their neighbors and putting them in unmarked cars without warrants or due process.

In Massachusetts, T'ruah rabbis, cantors, and hundreds of their community members gathered for Tisha B'Av to disrupt the detention of immigrants in inhumane conditions, to resist the use of charges of antisemitism to justify deportation, and to fight to end state contracts funding the deportation machine.

In New York City, T'ruah rabbis and cantors joined other faith leaders every Monday in Columbus Circle for Multifaith Mondays to create a sacred space for collective lament, prophetic resistance, and multifaith community-building in a time of deep division and threat to democratic values.

From confronting the authorities in the streets, to caring for immigrant families directly, to accompanying people to immigration court, T'ruah clergy across the country brought their fiercest rabbinic moral voices to meet the moment.

I'm grateful to T'ruah, which forges a path for rabbis like me to act boldly, act bravely, and act now. And I am very grateful for those in the T'ruah community who are stepping forward and into the breach, helping us discern as quickly and skillfully as they can what steps to take to build a culture of defiance, even as we labor under the burden of fear, our imperfect knowledge, and the discomfort of real uncertainty.

—Rabbi Rachel Gartner, Senior Advisor of Spiritual Care, Georgetown University

*As a rabbi and interfaith organizer in LA County, I have witnessed firsthand the depth of fear, trauma, and dehumanization facing my undocumented family, colleagues, and neighbors as they encounter increasingly authoritarian attempts to snatch them away from their families with no due process. In this scary time, T’ruah has been here to support us – a moral tether, a platform for rabbinic courage, a homebase for learning, and a container for me to navigate the unique challenges of Jewish leadership.

–Rabbi Susan Goldberg, Nefesh, Los Angeles, CA

T'ruah developed and deepened the moral leadership of rabbinical and cantorial students by offering Organizing 101 trainings, connecting students to take collective action on local campaigns, and launching a rabbinic mentorship program in Massachusetts.

Before joining the T'ruah team as a rabbinical student organizer, I considered my identities of organizer and rabbinical student as separate, and was eager to figure out how to connect them. This position allowed me to not just bridge these identities, but understand them as intrinsically intertwined.

—Noa Kattler Kupetz, Rabbinical Student Organizer 2024–2025

We brought moral clarity to the fight against antisemitism.

Understanding Antisemitism

A Training for All

www.truah.org

As the Trump administration cynically used our community's real fear of antisemitism to attack democratic norms and institutions, T'ruah responded with sharp analysis and moral clarity to make clear that weakening democracy makes Jews less safe.

When federal officials detained and tried to deport pro-Palestine student activists in the name of Jewish safety, we advocated for their free speech and due process rights, disrupting the narrative that immigrant safety and Jewish safety are at odds. We organized an open letter from hundreds of Jewish clergy calling for the release of Columbia graduate, Mahmoud Khalil, and joined an amicus brief on behalf of Tufts University student, Rümeyşa Öztürk.

In April, over 550 American rabbis and cantors signed a statement put out by T'ruah and J Street condemning the Trump administration's continued assault on democracy, universities, and pro-Palestinian students under the guise of combating antisemitism. We mobilized clergy to put out Jewish communal statements locally in Colorado, the DC area, Massachusetts, Minneapolis, New Mexico, North Carolina, and Philadelphia, signed by a total of 750+

I wish this could be presented across the universe. This is the epitome of learning.

—Vijah Ramjattan, Executive Director of the New York City Mayor's Office for the Prevention of Hate Crimes, on T'ruah's public antisemitism training in summer 2025 rabbis and cantors — making clear that a pro-democracy, pro-free-speech position is the Jewish communal consensus.

Through T’ruah’s trainings, Jewish and non-Jewish leaders and community members deepened their historical understanding and contemporary analysis of antisemitism. They learned to recognize the differences between criticism of Israel and antisemitism, to recognize the connections between antisemitism and other bigotries, and to employ effective strategies to respond.

In September, T’ruah CEO Rabbi Jill Jacobs testified before a House subcommittee about antisemitism in K-12 schools and made two things clear: Antisemitism is real. And our federal government’s approach to antisemitism is dangerously wrong. Right wing Representatives tried to make the case for defunding public education and punishing teachers unions in response to incidents of antisemitism. Rabbi Jacobs refuted this sloppy analysis. She boldly called for investing in hate crime prevention, implementing the comprehensive National Strategy to Counter Antisemitism, strengthening democratic institutions and norms, and rooting out white nationalists in government office.

For those of us striving to push our campus communities towards more honest conversations about Israel and Palestine, where we can feel our own pain yet make space in our hearts for the pain of others, T'ruah's resources, moral voice, and community of chaverim give rabbis like me the confidence to speak with both clarity and compassion. I am reminded that I am not alone, that I stand with thousands of rabbis who are committed to a Judaism that heeds our Torah's call for justice and dignity for all of God's creations.

—Rabbi Maya Zinkow, Campus Rabbi, Berkeley Hillel

We fought fiercely for an end to the war in Gaza.

Lo ta'amod al dam re'echa. Do not stand idly by the blood of your neighbor. (Lev. 19:16)

T'ruah rabbis and cantors took this core Jewish principle to heart when responding to the Israeli government's abandonment of the hostages, the brutal war in Gaza, the violence and displacement of Palestinians in the West Bank, and the destruction of democracy in Israel.

With settler violence at an all-time high in the West Bank, rabbis and cantors joined us there to bear witness, empowering them to better lead the charge to end the occupation.

And when the Israeli government used withholding food and other aid as a tool of war in Gaza, starving civilians in blatant violation of international humanitarian law, our chaverim did not stand idly by. From coast to coast, they organized Jewish protests in front of Israeli consulates and embassies. When Israelis took to the street to protest the government’s abandonment of the hostages and to call for a deal that would end the war, we joined them by protesting in the streets here, and by amplifying their message for audiences that too often saw support for the hostages and objection to the ongoing war as two separate struggles, not as the same one.

While many Jewish clergy had never dreamed of publicly protesting the Israeli government, they were empowered by T’ruah to rise to the moment’s moral demand. With flour sacks in their hands, they cried out, prayed, and in some cases, practiced civil disobedience to demand food be let into Gaza – at the same time insisting on a deal that would end the war and release the hostages.

Looking Ahead

As both donor and rabbi, I can say this: At a time when helplessness numbs and hopelessness looms, T'ruah inspires action, uplifting souls and making an impactful difference. It amplifies the voices of more than 2,300 Jewish clergy as a symphony of shofars, transporting the urgent call for justice and human rights far beyond what any one of us could do alone...Every donation echoes far beyond its source, amplifying our collective message to countless thousands in sanctuaries, streets, and hearts across the world, creating change that is immediate and immeasurable.

—Rabbi Sarah Reines, Congregation Emanu-El, New York, NY

This year was full of challenges we couldn't have predicted in our wildest nightmares. But at each moment, T'ruah stepped in to support rabbis and cantors in bringing a clear moral voice to standing up for human dignity and human rights.

As the Trump administration began its assault on American democracy, as ICE agents terrorized our neighbors and communities, as the brutal war between Israel and Hamas fundamentally fractured our communities and, indeed, the entire world, and as antisemitism rose globally, T'ruah rabbis and cantors turned to us for moral clarity, guidance, and concrete support.

We showed up in full force with courage, know-how, and rabbinic moral backbone to meet those needs in stride. Whether we were bringing clergy to Israel and the West Bank, convening clergy from across the country to level up their skills, empowering rabbis and cantors to lobby their elected officials, showing up for immigrants, or providing tools and resources, T'ruah remains committed to amplifying the rabbinic moral voice, to standing taller, going deeper, getting louder, and fighting harder in the years to come.

You make it possible. Thank you for standing behind T'ruah.
